1. The necessity has arisen for [REDACTED] to use a calculator in order to complete a research assignment levied on him by [REDACTED]

2. It has been suggested that the only practical solution would be for him to make use of the calculator in the office of Colonel Webb at the Library of Congress for a few hours a day. This solution is satisfactory with [REDACTED] considering that it is impossible for a private study room to be obtained for Mr. [REDACTED] at the present time and probably not in the future. 25X1A8a
